1. The Wheat Buck Stops Here

Richard Baker, Age, 2006-03-23

How was John Howard able to tell Australians in March 2003 that Saddam Hussein was "cruelly and cynically" manipulating the UN oil-for-food program? The public need to know where this information came from and why the Government was unable to piece together all the information it had on Saddam's corruption of the UN program. At the time Howard made his 2003 statement, AWB was the biggest participant in the UN program.

2. Searching For the Exit from Iraq

Amin Saikal, Age, 2006-03-21 What the US needs is an exit strategy in which it can disentangle itself from Iraq without driving the rest of the region into greater turmoil. If managed in co-operation with Iraq's neighbours and the UN, a withdrawal from Iraq might achieve such an objective. The alternative could be a withdrawal as messy as the exit from Saigon in 1975.

4. PNG: Government Ready to Welcome UN Intervention

PINA, 2006-03-21 Papua New Guinea's Foreign Minister has welcomed the reported offer by the UN to help remove five former Fijian soldiers still in Bougainville's no-go zone area.

5. Vietnam Cancers Linked to Water

Simon Kearney, Australian, 2006-03-22 Sailors who served on naval ships during the Vietnam War have been told their ships' drinking water, which was contaminated with Agent Orange, could be causing their cancers. The Department of Veterans Affairs is investigating a link between the number of cancers among sailors and the desalinated water on board some ships which contained dioxins from the deadly defoliant.

8. Illegal Boats 'Plundering, Outwitting Coast Watch'

Lindsay Murdoch, Age, 2006-03-22 Ian Munro, chief executive of Maningrida's Bawinanga Aboriginal Corporation, said coast-watch planes fitted with sophisticated surveillance equipment had failed to detect wooden-hulled boats that Indonesian crews hid among mangroves by day. Mr Munro said a properly funded Sea Ranger network could detect every illegal boat landing on the northern coast.

10. Nuclear Safety Net Must Remain Strong

Russell Trood, AFR*, 2006-03-22 Australia should engage India on a wide agenda, but it can wait for our uranium. Canberra should use its good standing within the non-proliferation community to press hard for international action. Aiming for the international community to recommit itself to non-proliferation rules that can accommodate the new era, and stop individual nations such as Iran, and India and the US, for that matter, seeking to rewrite the rules to suit their own purposes.

11. Call for NZ and US to Cooperate More in the Pacific

PINA, Tuesday: March 21, 2006 US Assistant Secretary of State Christopher Hill says the US wants to co-operate more with New Zealand in the Pacific. Mr Hill said development of the Pacific's island states was of concern to the US.
