Austral Policy Forum: 06/09A: A Firm Foundation: New Zealand Defence and Future Funding, Peter CozensPeter Cozens of the Centre for Strategic Studies at New Zealand's Victoria University of Wellington argues that under the Lange-led Labour and Bolger-led National administrations "different political perceptions of the role of the New Zealand Defence Force - caused in part by the end of the Cold War, the fracturing of ANZUS, peacekeeping operations and an estranged defence relationship with the US - resulted in lower budgets and investment in defence operations and infrastructure." But, contrary to the impressions of some outside New Zealand, the Labour-led administration under Helen Clark has committed some NZ$4.6 billion of extra Defence funding over a period of 10 year period, and "plans and political commitment are now in place to rebuild the New Zealand Defence Force to provide an ability to meet future policy objectives. The various newly introduced corporate management and planning tools provide a robust foundation on which successive administrations will be able to build and alter capabilities as changing circumstances dictate."
