1. Mob Steals Criminal Files from 1999 Bloodshed, Mark Dodd, Australian, 2006-05-30Attorney-General Longuinhos Monteiro confirmed at least 12 per cent of East Timor's entire criminal archive is missing after a mob looted the Attorney-General's office. The lost files include ones for General Wiranto, Indonesia's former armed forces chief, who was indicted by UN-backed prosecutors for rights abuses in East Timor. Wiranto has consistently denied any wrongdoing.

3. A Display of Power, Paul Kelly, Australian, 2006-05-31Australia's intervention in East Timor is both military and political. Its primary purpose was to respond to East Timor's security crisis. But this is not just a military intervention. It transcends the domain of law and order and penetrates to East Timor's political crisis. In this sense Australia is operating as a regional power or a potential hegemony that shapes security and political outcomes.

5. Australia Urges Alkatiri to Put Timor First, John Kerin and Geoffrey Barker, AFR*, 2006-06-01Australia has directly appealed to Prime Minister Mari Alkatiri to do what is in "the best interests of the nation". The appeal came after Dr Alkatiri declined to accept he had been stripped of his national security powers by President Xanana Gusmao. Two rebel defence faction leaders, Major Alfredo Reinado and Lieutenant Gastao Salshina, said Dr Alkatiri should resign or be sacked.

7. Australians Safe Despite Vehicle Bombing in Iraq, Cynthia Banham, SMH, 2006-06-01An Australian military vehicle in Iraq was damaged by a roadside bomb as the Defence Minister, Brendan Nelson, said Australian soldiers were moving into a more dangerous phase. Defence confirmed that an Australian light armoured vehicle, part of a convoy escorting Japanese engineers back to base in the southern city of Samawah, had two tyres blown out. All Australians had been accounted for and were safe.

9. Overseas Missions Get Their Own Police, Cynthia Banham, SMH, 2006-06-01Dedicated service police investigators are being sent to all of Australia's major military deployments, including Iraq, Afghanistan, the Solomon Islands and E. Timor. They will operate under an independent chain of command to the deployed troops, answerable to the Chief of Defence Force through a new chief investigator, Provost Marshal-Australian Defence Force, Colonel Tim Grutzner.
10. Papuan Religious Leader Spooked by Indonesian Security Officers, RNZI, 2006-05-31The head of the Papua's Baptist church says harassment by Indonesia won't stop him speaking out about human rights and justice in the province. Reverend Socratez Sofyan Yoman has released a list of incidents this year when he has been terrorised and intimidated by Indonesian military, police or intelligence officers.

12. The Other Disaster on our Doorstep, Allan Patience, SMH, 2006-06-01The UN has warned that PNG may be downgraded from being a "developing state" to a "least developed state", ranking it among the poorest nations in the world. Canberra's befuddled responses to the looming crisis in PNG have been as reactive as its responses to the Honiara and Dili catastrophes.
