1. Aussie Soldiers Fire on Civilians, Tom Hyland, Age, 2007-07-28 Australian troops in Afghanistan have fired on civilians twice in recent days, wounding two children. The shootings underline the complex and risky environment facing troops in Afghanistan, where it is hard to distinguish between civilians and Taliban guerillas. The shootings also risk undermining local support for the international presence. Afghan President Hamid Karzai has repeatedly complained about the excessive use of firepower by foreign forces.

5. Success or Failure? Iraq's Insurgency and Civil Violence and US Strategy: Developments through June 2007, Anthony H. Cordesman, CSIS, 2007-07-09A detailed analysis of the surge and recent developments of the ongoing insurgency and civil conflict in Iraq. Since the deployment of the troop 'surge' in February, the insurgency has appeared to counter the various shifts in Coalition and Iraqi security measures. The outcomes of these new military developments [are] unpredictable, as the Iraqi government remains stalled on major political, social and economic issues.
6. Cost Lingers after PNG Mission Collapse, AAP SMH, 2007-07-30The Australian Federal Police is spending more than $120,000 a month to lease two mostly empty Port Moresby apartment blocks following the collapse of a planned police mission two years ago. The total cost to taxpayers so far is $6 million. The accommodation was leased in 2005 ahead of the planned deployment of 230 police to assist PNG authorities improve law and order.
