"East Asian Regional Security Futures: Theater Missile Defense Implications"
The United Nations University, Tokyo, Japan, June 24-5, 2000
The development and future deployment of a missile defense system in Asia will enhance American and Japanese military superiority over Russia and China. As we all know, the American strategic superiority over Russia and China in the Asia-Pacific region is already real. The Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI) or the "Star Wars" is America's "missile umbrella," or "missile shield," which is to provide the United States and Japan with the "missile umbrella" to protect American and Japanese forces in the Asia-Pacific region. This weapon is not only able to provide American and Japanese forces with the "missile umbrella" but also to provide the United States and Japan with a "missile offensive capability." The development and deployment of a missile defense system in Asia will enhance American and Japanese military superiority over Russia and China.

In conclusion, missile defense will enhance the de facto American superiority in offensive strategic forces and allow them to gain a defensive superiority over Russia and China. At that point, America will have a real military superiority over Russia and China.
