The Associated Press ("EX-SEX SLAVE REJECTS JAPAN'S OFFER," Seoul, 04/05/98) reported that Lee Yong-soo, an ROK woman who was enslaved in a Japanese military brothel during World War II, on Tuesday refused to accept the ROK government's compensation offer unless the ROK recovers the money from the Japanese government. Lee was the first former "comfort woman" to publicly state that she would not accept the government compensation.

2. PRC Lifts Travel Restrictions to ROK

The Associated Press ("CHINA TO LET CITIZENS TRAVEL FREELY TO S. KOREA - REPORT," Seoul, 04/05/98) reported that the ROK's state-run KBS-TV said Tuesday that the PRC Foreign Ministry informed the ROK Embassy on Tuesday that it has decided to allow PRC citizens to travel to the ROK without restrictions, and it proposed talks to work out details of implementing the new policy. While ROK government officials were unavailable to confirm the report due to a national holiday on Tuesday, the move comes after PRC Vice President Hu Jintao said last week that the PRC would positively consider a request by ROK President Kim Dae-jung to designate the ROK as a free-travel country. Kim made the request in the hope that increasing Chinese tourists would help ease the ROK's financial difficulties.

3. ROK Labor Unrest

The Wall Street Journal (Karen Elliott House and Michael Schuman, "KIM SAYS UNEMPLOYMENT POSES BIGGEST THREAT TO KOREA'S REFORM," Seoul, 04/05/98) reported that ROK President Kim Dae-jung said Monday that rising unemployment poses the greatest threat to economic reform in the ROK. Unemployment in March reached 6.5 percent, or 1.38 million people, more than double the level at the end of last year. Kim said that he "can't exclude" the possibility of further labor unrest, but pledged to take strong action against labor when workers "interfere with management and go against the law." He warned that labor unrest could scare away foreign investment. He also promised that the government would build a welfare system to help the jobless, and would increase the size of an unemployment- insurance fund to 7.9 trillion won (US$5.9 billion) from the current five trillion won. He called on corporations to share the pain with labor by decreasing their debt levels and focusing on core industries. He also said that the government will conduct hearings on the causes of the economic crisis after local elections next month, but that the investigation will probably not implicate former President Kim Young- sam. Meanwhile Lee Kyu-sung, the minister of finance and economy, said Monday that "without social stability, we couldn't accomplish our reform program." He added that without strong reform efforts, "the economy will drop into longtime sluggishness."

He added that the PRC is willing "to actively consult and discuss with its U.S. counterpart the possibilities of cooperation in various fields." Kramer said that he hoped Zhang would visit the US after President Clinton comes to the PRC in June to "keep the momentum going between the two countries and their armed forces."
