1. DPRK Missile Program

Reuters (Jon Herskovitz, "NORTH KOREA SAYS PREPARING ROCKET LAUNCH", Seoul, 2009/02/24) reported that the DPRK said on Tuesday it was preparing to launch a satellite on one of its rockets. "The preparations for launching an experimental communications satellite ... are now making brisk headway," KCNA said. "When this satellite launch proves successful, the nation's space science and technology will make another giant stride forward in building an economic power." "It does not matter if it is a satellite or a ballistic missile because they use similar technology. The Defense Ministry will take it as a threat to our security," ROK Defense Minister Lee Sang-hee told the National Assembly.

2. DPRK Leadership

Xinhua News Agency ("KIM JONG IL CALLS FOR NEW TECHNOLOGIES TO BOOST INDUSTRIAL PRODUCTION", 2009/02/23) reported that Kim Jong Il has urged industrial plants to introduce new technologies to increase output. Kim's call came during a visit to the "July 7 Complex" chemical plant in North Hamgyong province, the official Rodong Sinmun daily said Monday, without giving the date of the visit. He praised the plant's efforts to cut down material consumption, and urged that it continue the policy as well as "give economic calculation primary consideration," the newspaper said. He also called on the workers to fully employ "mental power" and "collectivism" to increase output.

Xinhua News Agency (Lee Chi-dong, "DPRK TOP LEADER CALLS FOR CARRYING FORWARD SPIRIT OF SELF-RELIANCE", Pyongyang, 2009/02/21) reported that Kim Jong Il called for giving full play to the spirit of self-reliance when making inspections in two factories in North Hamgyong province, state media said Saturday. He praised the local workers for striving to solve problems they encountered in production through their own efforts and realizing modernization with their own technology. "Self-reliance is the only way out," he remarked. He also called for efforts to raise production capacity by continuing pushing forward technological upgrading and relying upon the socialist planned economy.

3. Japan-ROK-US on DRPK

Agence France Presse ("JAPAN, S KOREAN LEADERS PLEDGE TO COOPERATE WITH US ON N KOREA", Tokyo, 2009/02/23) reported that Japanese Prime Minister Taro Aso and ROK President Lee Myung-Bak vowed Monday to closely cooperate with the U.S. in solving world problems including DPRK's nuclear arms. "The two leaders agreed anew that close cooperation among Japan, South Korea and the United States is important in tackling pending issues in the international community, including the world economy and the North Korean issue, " the ministry said in a statement.

4. Inter-Korean Relations

United Press International ("SOUTH KOREA CALLS FOR NUKE-FREE PENINSULA", 2009/02/22) reported that the only way to peace and stability on the Korean Peninsula is to first keep it free of nuclear weapons, an ROK negotiator says. Huh Chul, a director general at Seoul's Foreign Ministry, said Sunday he got no disagreements from DPRK when he made that statement during last week's mini-six-party meeting in Moscow. Neither Pyongyang, Russia nor PRC voiced any objections to Huh's call for nuclear-free Korean peninsula as a pre-condition for peace, he said.

United Press International ("NORTH KOREA SAYS KOREAS AT EDGE OF WAR", Pyongyang, 2009/02/23) reported that DPRK said Monday the Koreas are teetering near war, calling ROK leader Lee Myung-bak a dictator who has escalated confrontation. "The Lee group has pushed the inter-Korean relations to the phase of total collapse and driven the situation to the brink of a war during the first year of its office. This is a thrice-cursed crime against the nation," editorialized Rodong Sinmun, the newspaper of the DPRK's Workers' Party. "Traitor Lee Myung-bak's first year in office were days of treason against the Korean people marked by his sycophancy toward the United States and the era of darkness notorious for his extreme fascist dictatorial rule," a commentary posted on Uriminzokkiri, DPRK's official Web site said.

Dong A Ilbo ("NK DECLARES 'MERCILESS CONFRONTATION' WITH S.KOREA", 2009/02/23) reported that DPRK yesterday issued another stern warning against ROK. Blasting the Lee Myung-bak administration, the statement said, "We will defeat the group of traitors with the most merciless and firm determination." The warning came in response to President Lee's alleged comment that, "If North Korea's socialism makes its people worry over having three meals a day, it is better for North Korea to abandon its socialist system." The DPRK's Committee for the Peaceful Reunification of the Fatherland said, "It's become clearer that we can no longer expect improvement in inter-Korean relations and reunification and peace on the Korean Peninsula." "While defiling the dignity and regime of its brethren and completely negate the existence of North Korea, how is inter-Korean harmony and co-existence possible?"

5. Inter-Korean Economic Cooperation

Korea Times (Kang Hyun-kyung, "ASSEMBLY RESOLUTION SOUGHT FOR RESUMING MT. GEUMGANG TOUR", 2009/02/22) reported that twenty lawmakers urged Seoul and Pyongyang leaders to work toward resuming tours to Mt. Geumgang, saying the travel ban has taken a toll on ROK and DPRK citizens heavily dependent on tourism income. "Since the suspension of the program, dozens of South Korean businesses and approximately 1,000 travel agents that offered organized trips to the North have gone to the brink of bankruptcy," said independent lawmaker Song Hun-suk, an architect of the resolution. Song said some 30,000 ROK and DPRK workers are on the verge of losing their jobs due to the travel ban and eighty percent of shops and restaurants in Gosung, Gangwon Province, near the border with the DPRK, have also been forced to shut down as a result of immense business losses. The bipartisan group will submit the non-binding motion calling for the resumption of the tourism program to the National Assembly, Monday.

6. US-DPRK Relations

Yonhap News (Lee Chi-dong, "PERRY CALLS FOR U.S., ALLIES TO PRESS 'RESET BUTTON' ON N. KOREA POLICY", Seoul, 2009/02/23) reported that former U.S. Secretary of Defense William Perry said Monday it is time to "press a reset button" on often-troubled dealings with DPRK, adding "business as usual" will not work to resolve the nuclear problem. "To determine how the United States should deal with North Korea will be one of the first major security decisions of President Obama." Perry said it would be "unwise" for President Barack Obama to simply take a wait-and-see stance amid reports of Kim Jong-Il's illness.

7. ROK Military

Korea Times (Lee Sang-hee, "ADVANCED KOREAN MILITARY REACHES OUT TO THE WORLD", 2009/02/24) reported that the Lee Myung-bak administration seeks to realize a "Global Korea" that fulfills its roles and responsibilities in the international community. The administration's basic principle in national security strategy is to create "an advanced security posture that reaches out to the world," expanding the scope of our security beyond the Korean Peninsula to encompass the world. First, stable management of the security situation on the Korean Peninsula is of the highest priority in ROK's defense policy. Second, the ROK-U.S. Alliance, the backbone of our security, is being developed in a future-oriented manner. Third, cooperative military relations with neighboring nations are being expanded for shaping security environments in favor of peace and stability both on the Korean Peninsula and in the region. Fourth, our military will increase its participation in peacekeeping operations to lead the way toward a "Mature Global Korea."

The labor sector conceded to a wage freeze or wage cuts at troubled businesses, while management pledged to refrain from layoffs. The companies will introduce workshifts and a peak wage system and operate vocational training and unpaid leave to enable job sharing, the panel said in a statement.

"With this agreement, our side can now acquire rights to develop oil reserves in Iraq's Basra region, where most Iraqi oil is produced," the ROK presidential office said in a press release. "This, of course, is not a small deal because it entitles us to over two billion barrels of oil, which will be enough to supply the entire nation for nearly the next three years," Lee Dong-kwan, a spokesman for the office said.

16. PRC Climate Change

SciDev.Net (Lin Shujuan, "CHINA'S WATER DEFICIT 'WILL CREATE FOOD SHORTAGE'", Beijing, 2009/02/23) reported that a leading climate change expert has warned that water shortage is the greatest threat to PRC's agricultural sector this century. "China will see a food shortfall of 5-10 per cent — a disastrous outcome in a country of 1.3 billion people — unless effective and timely measures are taken," said Lin Erda, one of PRC's top climate change experts. Climate change is affecting an increasingly large area of crop-growing land in PRC — up from 3,882 hectares hit by natural disasters in 2005 to 4,899 hectares in 2007, Lin said.

UK Guardian (Duncan Clark, "CHINA'S INCREASING CARBON EMISSIONS BLAMED ON MANUFACTURING FOR WEST", 2009/02/23) reported that the full extent of the west's responsibility for PRC emissions of greenhouse gases has been revealed by a new study. The report shows that half of the recent rise in PRC's carbon dioxide pollution was caused by the manufacturing of goods for other countries. Around 9% of total PRC emissions are now the result of manufacturing goods for the US, and around 6% for Europe. Academics and campaigners increasingly say responsibility for these emissions lies with the consumer countries.

It is sometimes used illegally to produce animals with more and leaner meat. The Internet portal Netease.com announced plans to raise up 10,000 pigs on webcam-equipped organic farms in Zhejiang Province. The company said it was jumping into pig farming because the Internet offered an ideal way to reassure PRC consumers unnerved by recent food-safety scandals.

The two bronzes are part of a collection looted 150 years ago by British and French troops from the Summer Palace. Berge stated, "The only thing I ask is for China to give human rights, liberty to Tibet and to welcome the Dalai Lama ." PRC foreign ministry spokesman Ma Zhaoxu responded, "To infringe upon Chinese people's cultural rights on the pretext of human rights is just ridiculous." "In modern history, Western imperial powers have looted a lot of Chinese cultural relics, including those in the Summer Palace, and these cultural relics should be returned to China," he said.

20. Sino-US Trade Relations

Agence France Presse (D'arcy Doran, "CHINA TO HEED CLINTON'S CALL ON BUYING US BONDS: ECONOMISTS", Shanghai,) reported that PRC has little choice but to follow Hillary Clinton's call and continue buying US Treasuries, as reversing course would lead to the value of its investments plunging, economists said Monday. Clinton urged PRC on Sunday to keep buying US debt, saying it would help jumpstart the flagging US economy and stimulate demand for PRC exports. In fact, PRC has to keep investing in the United States if it wants to protect the value of its trillions in dollar holdings, said Lu Feng, an economist at Peking University's PRC Center for Economic Research.
