1. DPRK Nuclear Program

Agence France-Presse ("US THREATS RULE OUT PEACE IN KOREA: NORTH'S ENVOY", London, 2009/09/28) reported that there can never be peace and security on the Korean peninsula while the United States "continues to threaten us with nuclear weapons ", Pyongyang's ambassador to London said Monday. The DPRK was committed to denuclearising the peninsula but the secretive state will pursue its nuclear programme while Washington's "hostility" remains, Ja Song-Nam said in a rare public speech. He said the DPRK had pulled out of the six-party talks on its nuclear activities because they were being treated unfairly, given they were surrounded by nuclear-armed states and countries under a nuclear umbrella.

2. ROK, PRC on DPRK Nuclear Program

Yonhap (Tony Chang, "SEOUL, BEIJING REAFFIRM INTOLERANCE OF N. KOREAN NUKE", Shanghai, 2009/09/29) reported that ROK Foreign Minister Yu Myung-hwan and his PRC counterpart Yang Jiechi on Tuesday reaffirmed their governments' positions to not accept the DPRK's possession of nuclear weapons, according to Seoul officials. The ministers, however, also agreed to leave the door open for future dialogue with the DPRK and promised to devote their efforts to bringing Pyongyang back to the stalled six-party talks.

Yonhap News (Lee Chi-dong, "U.S. CAUTIOUS ABOUT STARTING BILATERAL TALKS WITH N. KOREA: OFFICIAL", Seoul, 2009/09/28) reported that the United States is likely to take a few more weeks to decide the time, venue, and other details of anticipated bilateral talks with DPRK, a top ROK official said Monday after meetings with senior American officials handling the DPRK issue last week in Washington. U.S. officials are cautious about "putting the first button in the right hole," since dealings on the DPRK's nuclear program may set the precedent for negotiations with Iran, he told reporters on the customary condition of anonymity.

"The government is not considering any massive food or fertilizer assistance to DPRK at this point in time," Cheong Wa Dae spokesman Park Sun-kyoo told a daily press briefing.

The Korea Herald (Kim Ji-hyun, "SEOUL SIGNALS NO CHANGES IN N.K. POLICY", 2009/09/29) reported that Foreign Ministry officials yesterday indicated that there would be no changes to Seoul's DPRK policies demanding "irrevocable" denuclearization measures from Pyongyang in return for extensive economic and social aid. They also reiterated that Seoul and Washington were - contrary to recent media reports highlighting a possible rift in how the two allies would line up the possible incentives to DPRK - indeed on the same page on their DPRK policies.
