1. Six Party Talks

Kyodo News ("CHINESE VICE FOREIGN MINISTER CANCELS VISIT TO U.S.: U.S. OFFICIAL", 2006-05-04) reported that PRC Vice Foreign Minister Wu Dawei, who chairs six-party talks on the DPRK's nuclear issues, has canceled a plan to visit the US to discuss ways to break the nearly six-month stalemate in the multilateral talks, a senior US State Department official indicated Wednesday. The PRC vice foreign minister has no plans to visit the US, said the US official, who declined to be named. Diplomatic sources said the PRC side canceled Wu's visit to Washington, which was initially set to start next Monday, for unknown reasons.

2. DPRK Food Policy

Associated Press ("NORTH KOREA COULD FACE ANOTHER FOOD CRISIS, U.S. HUMAN RIGHTS GROUP WARNS ", 2006-05-04) reported that the DPRK cannot feed its people and could face another famine like the one that killed up to 3 million unless it changes its "regressive" food policies, a US rights group warned Thursday. "Only a decade ago, similar policies led to the famine that killed anywhere from 580,000 to more than 3 million," the group said in a statement released to reporters in Seoul. The group urged the DPRK to reopen the country to international aid agencies and ensure that its food distribution is not discriminatory based on loyalty to the regime. "The government is apparently trying to turn back the clock to regain some of the control lost when it allowed people greater freedom to move around and buy grain," Human Rights Watch said. "There is little reason to believe the North Korean government is now capable of providing enough food to all its citizens."

3. DPRK Defectors

Associated Press ("U.S. ASSISTS N. KOREAN REFUGEES ", 2006-05-04) reported that the Bush administration is working to bring a group of DPRK refugees to the US and could have them in the country within two weeks, a State Department official said Wednesday. The State Department official, who spoke on condition of anonymity because of the issue's sensitivity, said the refugees are in a Southeast Asian nation, and if bureaucratic hurdles can be cleared, they could be in the US soon. A separate US government source said the six refugees include several women who were sold into sexual slavery or forced marriages. Both officials would not identify the nation, saying they were worried the refugees or their families could be harmed by DPRK agents.

\(return to top\) Joongang Ilbo ("MINISTER: L.A. COURT'S RULING WAS 'NONSENSE'", 2006-05-04) reported that a landmark court decision in which a DPRK defector was allowed to seek refuge in the US due to oppression from Seoul was "nonsense," Unification Minister Lee Jong-seok said yesterday. He said, however, he would not protest the decision. ROK Foreign Minister Ban Ki-moon also played down the decision. "As far as I know, it is a decision by a local immigration court, not a decision by the U.S. administration," Mr. Ban said in his weekly press briefing. \(return to top\)

4. DPRK Human Rights

Yonhap ("U.S. COMMISSION URGES HELSINKI MODEL ON N.K. HUMAN RIGHTS", 2006-05-03) reported that a US human rights commission recommended Wednesday that the Bush administration keep the DPRK as a country of particular concern (CPC) on human rights, citing lack of any tolerance for dissent in the state. The Commission on International Religious Freedom (CIRF), in its 2006 annual report, urged the US government to adopt the Helsinki model in dealing with the DPRK, referring to a 1975 agreement between the US and 34 other Western nations pledging to make human rights their top policy on Russia -- then the Soviet Union -- and Eastern Europe.
