1. DPRK, PRC on Six Party Talks

RIA Novosti ("NORTH KOREA SECURES CHINA'S SUPPORT ON NUCLEAR ISSUE ", 2006-01-18) reported that DPRK leader Kim Jong Il secured PRC support in resolving the international standoff over his regime's nuclear ambitions as he met with President Hu Jintao at the end of an unofficial eight-day visit to PRC Wednesday. According to the Korean Central News Agency (KCNA), Hu pledged help in fostering the resumption of the stalled six party talks. He described the six party talks as "the correct choice" for settling the nuclear dispute. Kim reportedly said he remained committed to peacefully resolving the conflict surrounding Pyongyang's nuclear program. KCNA quoted him as saying "there is no change in [North Korea's] basic stand of maintaining the goal of denuclearizing the Korean Peninsula, implementing the joint statement issued at the fourth round of the six-party talks and pursuing a negotiated peaceful settlement."

Xinhua ("S. KOREA WELCOMES DPRK TOP LEADER'S VISIT TO CHINA ", 2006-01-18) reported that the ROK government Wednesday welcomed top leader of the DPRK Kim Jong-il's recent visit to the PRC. ROK Foreign Ministry expressed its hope in a statement issued Wednesday evening that Kim's visit would lead to the resumption of stalled six party talks. "We hope Kim's China visit would provide a good opportunity to make progress toward a peaceful resolution of the North Korean (DPRK) nuclear issue in the six-party talks," the very brief statement said.

3. Kim Jong-il's Trip to PRC

Reuters ("N.KOREAN LEADER RETURNS HOME ON TRAIN - YONHAP", 2006-01-18) reported that DPRK leader Kim Jong-il is believed to have crossed the border into the DPRK from the PRC on Wednesday ending a rare international trip conducted under a heavy veil of secrecy, ROK's Yonhap news agency said.

4. Expert on Kim Jong-il's Trip to PRC

The Korea Times ("NK TRIES TO REVIVE SINUIJU AS SPECIAL ECONOMIC ZONE'", 2006-01-18) reported that DPRK North Korean leader Kim Jong-il's secret visit to the PRC is aimed at reviving its special economic zone in Sinuiju, former Unification Minister Park Jae-kyu said at a seminar in Washington, D.C. on Tuesday. His remarks at the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars came as Pyongyang is expected to come up with major economic reform measures in the near future, following Kim's tour of the PRC's booming commercial south. "After his visit to Shanghai (in January 2001), I heard that Kim instructed his officials to develop Sinuiju as an IT-oriented industrial area," Park said. "I think Kim's visit was intended to get China's help to jumpstart his special economic zone projects in Sinuiju and the Rajin-Sonbong region."

6. DPRK-US Relations

Chosun Ilbo ("N.KOREA A 'MOB NATION': U.S. COLUMNIST ", 2006-01-18) reported that a fellow of the hard-right US think tank Heritage Foundation has accused the DPRK of becoming a "mob nation" that proliferates drugs and weapons besides counterfeiting US dollars. "North Korea has become a gangster nation, pocketing $700 million to $1 billion a year from counterfeiting, trafficking illicit narcotics [and] smuggling contraband smokes," Peter Brooks wrote in the conservative New York Post. He said Pyongyang's ill-gotten gains equal "the country's legitimate annual export income."

8. Expert on DPRK Leadership

The Korea Times ("KIM'S SELF-CONFIDENCE WEAKENED' ", 2006-01-18) reported that DPRK leader Kim Jong-il may be learning as much as he can about the outside world, but it doesn't seem to be doing him much good, according to a former ROK unification minister. In fact, Park Jae-kyu said during a lecture in Washington on Tuesday that Kim's newly acquired awareness may have sapped his self-confidence. "One difference I noticed in my latest encounter with the chairman was that the aura of supreme self-confidence I witnessed in 2000 seemed to be either absent or markedly muted," Park said.
