Yonhap ("ROH'S OFFER OF 'MANY CONCESSIONS' TO BREATHE NEW LIFE ", 2006-05-10) reported that ROK President Roh Moo-hyun's offer to make "lots of concessions" to the DPRK will likely add to momentum in inter-Korean relations and stalled six-nation talks over the Pyongyang's nuclear weapons programs, according to analysts Wednesday.

\(return to top\) Yonhap ("RENOVATION OF N. KOREAN SIDE OF TRUCE VILLAGE SPARKS SPECULATION ", 2005-05-10) reported that the DPRK has begun large-scale renovation work on a building at the truce village of Panmunjeom, sparking speculation here about whether the state is preparing it for a visit by a senior official, such as its leader Kim Jong-il, officials said Wednesday. According to officials at the UN Command, which oversees the joint security area, the DPRK began renovating the building, known as Panmungak, at the beginning of the month. \(return to top\)

3. DPRK Defector Issue

Yonhap ("SEOUL JABS AT U.S. COURT'S APPROVAL OF N. KOREAN DEFECTOR'S ASYLUM", 2006-05-10) reported that ROK officials said Wednesday that a recent US court decision to grant political asylum to a DPRK defector who has ROK citizenship should not be used as a precedent for other defectors. The ROK's Justice Minister Chun Jung-bae downplayed the ruling, saying it is not the official stance of the US government on the DPRK defector issue.

4. DPRK-US Travel

New York Times ("FOR A FEW WEEKS, NORTH KOREA JOINS AXIS OF TOURISM", 2006-05-10) reported that President Bush may consider it a member of the "axis of evil", but the DPRK is nonetheless a hot travel ticket this summer. The DPRK will allow US passport holders to enter on visas Aug. 10 to Oct. 10 to go to the 2006 Arirang Festival in Pyongyang and to attend the 2006 Mass Games, a synchronized gymnastics performance involving thousands of participants.

5. Ancient Korean City

Associated Press ("CHINA REPORTS DISCOVERY OF ANCIENT CITY", 2006-05-10) reported that the ruins of a 2,000-year-old walled city have been found in a reservoir on the PRC's northeastern border with the DPRK, the PRC's official news agency reported Wednesday. The mud-covered ruins were exposed when the water level in the Yunfeng Reservoir was lowered for repairs, Xinhua News Agency said, citing government officials. The report said the ruins, near the present-day city of Ji'an, are believed to date to China's Han Dynasty in 202 B.C.-220 A.D. But Korea's Koguryo kingdom ruled the area at that time, and Xinhua said the city included tombs of Koguryo design.

12. PRC Development Politics

The Asahi Shimbun ("FLOOD OF ANGRY OPPOSITION TO DAM GETS CHINA'S ATTENTION", 2006-05-10) reported that an outcry from locals, NGOs, and even the state-owned media, barely a month after the picturesque Nujiang river was declared a UNESCO World Heritage site in July 2003 and plans by the PRC to build a massive dam on the site were revealed, may have actually persuaded the PRC government to temporarily halt the project.

13. PRC Currency

The New York Times ("BUSH AIDES STRUGGLING WITH YUAN", 2006-05-10) reported that after nearly three years of pushing the PRC to let its currency float more freely, with only modest results, the Bush administration still appears reluctant to accuse the PRC of manipulating its exchange rate. A decision to officially brand the PRC a manipulator would require the administration to formally open negotiations with the government in Beijing, but its main effect would be as a signal to currency markets that the US wants the dollar to decline in value.
