1. Afghanistan: Current Situation

Following the capture of Kabul, the Northern Alliance's foreign minister Abdullah Abdullah has invited Afghan groups for negotiations on the future of the country. The supreme commander of the Taliban Mullah Mohammad Omar claimed that his real goal is "the extinction of America." The Pakistani government has denied a report on Iranian radio claiming that Mullah Omar and Osama bin Laden have crossed into Pakistan.

2. Afghanistan: Future Prospects

Afghanistan's victorious Northern Alliance forces have come under strong international pressure to seek a broad-based interim government. Pakistan, Iran and the United States have also reiterated their support for a broad based and multi-ethnic setup in Kabul. Umer Farooqi suggested that "in the fast-changing scenario of Afghanistan, most of the options, including the one aimed at bringing Zahir Shah into power, for a broad-based post-Taliban government are losing relevance." Iran's President Mohammad Khatami has warned that the anti-terror campaign, if conducted incorrectly, may lead to the expansion of terrorism. Asia Times columnist Pepe Escobar argues that the Northern Alliance victory is "the beginning of the balkanization of Afghanistan."

4. Pakistan

The fate of Pakistani volunteers who had crossed into Afghanistan to join the Taliban militia remains uncertain. The Pakistani government has approached the United Nations relief agencies to verify the number of Pakistanis killed in Afghanistan. Pakistan has suggested that the Northern Alliance may be open to establishing friendly relations with Pakistan.

"Pakistan" (SANDNet Weekly Update, Vol. 2 #47)

Responding to the fall of Taliban from Kabul, the Pakistani government has called for an international force to take over the city. President Pervez Musharraf outlined his government's view of the political strategy that would best serve the interests of Afghanistan and the region.

"Pakistan" (SANDNet Weekly Update, Vol. 2 #46)

7. General Assessments

Alam examines the strategic and tactical "blunders" committed by the Taliban. Ahmad Rashid argued that the Taliban's retreat from northern Afghanistan has set the stage for new military battles while accelerating the "challenge of finding a legitimate leadership in a country where war is a way of life." Malaysian Prime Minister Mahathir Mohammad has stated the war against terrorism is "beginning to look more and more like a war against Muslims."

"General Assessments" (SANDNet Weekly Update, Vol. 2 #47)

Indian Prime Minister Atal Bihari Vajpayee has indicated his government's openness to accepting a future Afghan government that may include "liberal" Taliban as long as "the Taliban, as a name" is not used in any "new dispensation."

"India" (SANDNet Weekly Update, Vol. 2 #46)

A.H. Amin argues that many "myths and misconceptions" about Afghan military history have gained credence because of the war. Manabi Majumdar suggests that "peace activism" is the most effective course of action for preventing the "carnage being perpetrated by either rogue 'warlords' or 'rogue states.'" Shahid Javed Burki argues that Pakistan must fight on two fronts simultaneously; "on the battlefield and in the cities, towns and villages on both sides of the Pak-Afghan border. The other war must involve economic development, social improvement and nation-building in both Afghanistan and in the Pakistani areas along the border."

"General Assessments" (SANDNet Weekly Update, Vol. 2 #46)

Pakistan

1. Pakistan: Domestic Situation

Pakistani law enforcements agencies have been put on high alert to track down "as many as 96 most wanted sectarian terrorists" who have been hiding in Afghanistan, and may try to "enter Pakistan in the disguise of Afghan refugees." Kamran Khan discusses Pakistan's security concerns after the fall of the Taliban government.

"Pakistan: Domestic Situation" (SANDNet Weekly Update, Vol. 2 #47)

Pakistan President General Pervez Musharraf indicated his intentions to stay as the president of the country after the scheduled general elections in October 2002. Meanwhile, the Pak-Afghan Defense Council, an alliance of militant Islamic parties, has announced plans for more anti-government demonstrations in the country.

"Pakistan Domestic Situation" (SANDNet Weekly Update, Vol. 2 #46)

---

2. US-Pakistan Relations

Pakistan and the United States have signed an agreement under which the US will provide US$600 million in direct budget and balance of payment support to Pakistan. According to the United States Assistant Secretary of State for South Asia Christina Rocca, the events of the last two months have opened "new possibilities for recasting Indo-Pak relations and reducing tensions." Pakistani media have reported general disappointment with the U.S. aid package. President Pervez Musharraf has also expressed his disappointment at the United States' refusal to release F-16 fighter planes to Pakistan.
