BERKELEY, CA, AUGUST 06, 1999 --

The Nautilus Institute has received support grants from the Ford Foundation and the MacArthur Foundation for its California Global Corporate Accountability Project. The research and advocacy Project examines ways to raise the environmental and social performance of California-based multinationals through innovations in corporate governance based on disclosure, state-level regulation and community engagement. Focused initially on oil and high-tech sectors, the Project is a collaboration with the Natural Heritage Institute, Human Rights Advocates and the Nautilus Institute.
