Dr. Finkelstein is member of the CNA Corporation's Center for Strategic Studies. As the Deputy Director of "Project Asia" he specializes in Asian security issues.

A long-time student of Chinese security affairs, Dr. Finkelstein holds an MA and Ph.D. in Chinese history from Princeton University. He studied Chinese language at Nankai University in Tianjin.

He is a retired U.S. Army Foreign Area Officer for China with extensive experience in joint political-military assignments at the national level. Among his various political-military assignments, he served as the Director of Asian Studies, J-8, Joint Chiefs of Staff, and Assistant Defense Intelligence Officer for East Asia & the Pacific.

Commissioned a Signal Corps officer, he held various command and staff assignments in the field to include command of B Company, 40th Signal Battalion (Combat Cable Construction), service in the 505th Signal Company, 86th Signal Battalion, the 11th Signal Brigade, as well as serving as the Tactical Communications Officer with the United Nations Command Joint Security Force in Panmunjom, Korea.

He is a graduate of the United States Military Academy at West Point, the U.S. Army Command & General Staff College, the U.S. Army War College, the U.S. Army Airborne School, and the JFK Center for International Military Assistance and Unconventional Warfare.

As Assistant Professor for Chinese History at West Point he developed and taught courses on the history of the Chinese revolution, the history of the PLA, and Asian warfare throughout the ages.

His 1993 book-length study, Washington's Taiwan Dilemma, 1949-1950: From Abandonment to Salvation, was hailed in a Presidential Studies Quarterly review as "blazing a new trail" and should "take an important place in the literature of U.S. Chinese relations in the mid twentieth century."
